

EDUCATORS GATHER TO CONSIDER THE EXCEPTIONAL CHILD

Conference at Woods Schools Concerns "Challenge of Progressive Education"

250 MEET IN LANGHORNE

Dr. W. Rex Crawford Says "We Must Make Plans For Our Human Resources"

LANGHORNE, May 4 — "We must make plans for our human resources, the end for which our natural resources exist." This was the statement of Dr. W. Rex Crawford, chairman, Sociology Department, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, yesterday, in addressing the outstanding educators, child psychologists and leaders in child welfare, assembled at the Woods School, under the auspices of the Child Research Clinic of The Woods Schools. His subject was "A Cultural Approach to the Exceptional Child." The occasion was the fourth annual conference on "Education and the Exceptional Child," and concerned itself with "The Challenge of Progressive Education," with particular reference to the problems of the education of the exceptional child—the slow child, the problem child, the child with behavior problems, the child with reading and speech difficulties, and the like.

Dr. Crawford was one of the speakers, several of whom emphasized the importance of special education to bring out the potentially valuable in human resources.

He told that "There is intimate relation between the way of life of a society, and the way of life of individuals born into that culture. We exist as carriers of the values we have derived from our culture. We must have a culture, and the more integrated and protected against outside influences it is, the better."

"Every culture in the past has sinned through failure to develop, or through active repression of, the capacities of its people. Today we hear much of Human Resources. The exceptional in human material is potentially the most valuable. We must achieve an acceptance of differences which will enable us to escape cultural poverty."

"It is silly to worry about our soil, our forests, our coal and oil and iron, and to fail to make plans for people who are not only the greatest of our resources but the end for which all resources of every kind exist."

At the morning session, devoted to "Presenting the Problem," the chairman was George A. Walton, M. A., principal, George School.

Speakers and their topics included: Mrs. Katherine M. Cook, chief, Division of Special Problems, U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D. C., "The Need for Special Education for the Exceptional Child;" Stanwood Cobb, A. B. A. M., founder, Progressive Education Association, and Principal, Chevy Chase Country Day School, Chevy Chase, Md., "The Inferiority Complex and Its Cure;" Dr. J. E. W. Wallin, director, Division of Special Education and Mental Hygiene, State Department of Public Instruction, Wilmington, Del., visiting professor, Summer Session, Duke University, Durham, N. C., "The Nature and Implications of Truancy from the Standpoint of the Schools;" and Miles Murphy, Ph. D., Assistant Director, the Psychological Laboratory and Clinic, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, "The Social Adjustment of the Exceptional Child of Borderline Mentality." Guests were invited to luncheon at The Woods Schools, and there was an opportunity to visit the schools in session.

At the afternoon session, devoted to "Toward the Solution," the chairman was Frank Astor, Ph. D., Liaison Officer, National Child Welfare Association and the Bureau of Child Guidance, New York, N. Y. Speakers and their topics included: Charles A. Ford, Ph. D., chairman, Department of Psychology, Temple University, Philadelphia, "Institutional Rearing as a Factor in Delinquency;" W. Carson Ryan, Jr., president, Progressive Education Association, staff associate, Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, New York, N. Y., "Progressive Education Considers the Exceptional Child;" Dr. W. Rex Crawford, chairman, Sociology Department, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, "A Cultural Approach to the Exceptional Child;" Robert G. Bernreuter, Ph. D., associate professor of Psychology, The Pennsylvania State College, "Progressive Education as it Relates to the Personality of the Exceptional Child;" and Mrs. Hedi Katz, assistant director, Chatam Square Music School, Consultant at Clinic for Gifted Children, New York University, New York, N. Y., "Creative Music in the Progressive Education Program for the Exceptional Child."

Native of Bristol Dies At His Trenton Residence

A native of Bristol, William A. Percy, died at his home, 32 South Cook avenue, Trenton, N. J., Monday evening, Mr. Percy for 37 years was a conductor on the P. R. R. He had been ill but a brief time.

He was born here on July 11, 1869, and at an early age took employment on the Philadelphia and Reading R. R. and transferred to the Pennsylvania about 1900 and retired three years ago.

He was a member of the P. R. R. Relief Department, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen No. 7, The Mutual Benefit Association of the P. R. R., and Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Helen Smith Percy; one daughter, Mrs. George Callan; two sons, Alfred R. Percy, Jr.; his step-mother, Mrs. Ida Percy, of Bristol; two sisters, Miss Elizabeth Percy, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Linford Kline, of Bristol, and one brother, Martin Percy, of Collingswood, N. J.

The funeral will be held from his late home on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.

COMPLETING DETAILS FOR BIG CELEBRATION

Hundreds of Committee Members Are Now Busily Engaged In Preparations

WILL OPEN MAY 29TH

DOYLESTOWN, May 4—Hundreds of committee members are busily engaged in completing details in conjunction with the 100th anniversary celebration of Doylestown's incorporation as a Borough, May 29 to June 4 inclusive.

The celebration will open Sunday, May 29, with "Church Day" and a religious concert. Rev. Dr. George M. Lohr, of Philadelphia, will deliver the address at a union service in the county court house Sunday night.

Monday, Memorial Day, will be featured by belfry music at six a. m., a visit by the town criers at eight a. m., and the arrival of the cavalcade at nine a. m. to officially start off the celebration. There will be a reception at 10 a. m., a memorial service at 11 a. m., and planting of the Centennial oak at two p. m. A military parade is scheduled for three p. m., Memorial Day, and a public meeting in the Court House at night.

The same opening event will take place each day, started off by the town criers, announcing plans and programs for the day. "Dancing On The Green" is scheduled for Tuesday, May 31, at one p. m. At two p. m., there will be a floral pageant and display at the Burpee Flower Gardens, one of the garden spots of the East, with tea served, followed by dancing.

Wednesday, June 1, there will be the same opening ceremony, with a musical concert at two p. m., the "Parade of Progress" at five p. m., and the presentation of the Centennial pageant at the Doylestown Fair grounds in which 500 persons will participate in costume.

All day Thursday, June 2, will be devoted to historical exhibits, with the Mercer Museum and the Bucks County Court House being the center of activity. There will be a reception at the Bucks County Historical Society at two p. m., and the second presentation of the Centennial pageant in the evening at the fair grounds, featuring by the "crowning of the pageant queen."

Friday, June 3, will be "Sports Day" and an all-day flower show at Salem Reformed Church. There will be a high school band concert at 10 a. m., and a school concert in the Court House in the evening at eight o'clock, followed by the Assembly Ball in the Doylestown Armory in the evening. The "Sports Day" program will be featured by a demonstration of mass calisthenics, baseball games and the annual Boy Week athletic contests. Friday night the Bucks County Firemen's Association will meet in convention here.

The big celebration, the largest ever before attempted in the history of Doylestown, will close Saturday with a big day of events featured by the parade of the fire companies of Bucks county at two p. m., and the Mardi Gras and frolic in the evening, with professional entertainers.

Burgess Dr. John J. Sweeney, chairman of the invitation committee, is anxious to secure the names of cities, who should be invited to attend people, living in other towns and Centennial Week.

One of the new plans is for an information book where strangers may also register in a special book which will later be presented to the Bucks County Historical Society.

Doylestown Borough Council is lending its support to this very worthwhile project. Plans are complete to entertain at least 25,000 visitors here during the week. Hotels and inns are making advance preparations, as well as automobile clubs, railroads and bus lines.

Burial was made in St. Mark's Cemetery this morning of Peter Matalates, Torresdale, who died suddenly at his home. Mass was said in St. Mark's Church. The H. S. Rue Estate was in charge of the interment.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

The Eastern District Conference of Mennonites of North America has accepted the offer of Justice of the Peace J. Walter Landis, of Quakertown, of a 20-acre portion of his fine farm in Millford Township to be used for a retreat for denominational development to be known as "Hazel Brook Sunday School Playground."

The tract is located along Hazel Brook, a branch of Swamp Creek between Red Bridge and Finland in a very picturesque area. The plan calls for the building of dormitories, a pavilion, dining hall and other buildings to be completed by 1940 when the General Conference of Mennonites of North America will hold its annual convention there.

Judge Thomas Knight, Doylestown township resident, who died April 16, left an estate of $7000 and directed that after the death of a beneficiary the income of the estate is to be paid to the trustees of the Friends Boarding Home at Newtown. The estate is left in trust to Mabel K. Jarvis, 127 Mount Way, Rutherford, N. J., upon whose death the income goes to the Newtown home. If the home no longer exists the trust then goes to the trustees of Jeanes Hospital at Fox Chase.

One of Doylestown's newest industries, MacEwan & Smith, Inc., rubber manufacturers, has been operating steadily since its location here in February, according to assistant manager O. Maynard Doerflinger, of 184 East State street.

The new industry, which is an independent firm, employs about 20 people, most of whom are residents of the County Seat.

They are employed in the manufacture of rubber products, which are entirely molded goods, including accessories used in the automobile trade.

The manufactured products include gear shift covers, emergency brake covers and buffers which are used on cars on the Third Avenue Railway in New York City.

Flames, which were believed to have had their origin in a defective flue, between midnight and three o'clock, Monday, badly damaged the eight-room stone house on the property of John Gural, who resides on the road leading from New Britain to Iron Hill.

The fire was discovered by a passing motorist, who notified the Doylestown Company, members of which responded very quickly. The Chalfont Fire Company also responded to the call.

It is believed the flames broke out in one of the rooms on the first floor and in a very short time made their way to the second floor and other parts of the structure.

Six homes near the central business section of Sellersville were threatened by a fire which gutted a building adjoining the Wismer Auto Body Shop, Branch street, at four o'clock Friday afternoon.

Only the immediate response of the Sellersville Fire Company prevented the entire building from going up in flames and spreading to the five residences which house six families. A fairly strong breeze was blowing in the direction of the nearby houses, all of which are frame structures.

The fire is believed to have started in the rear of the Wismer building. About $1000 worth of furniture and other articles were destroyed. Because the flames crept rapidly to the second floor the ceiling of the ground floor and walls on the inside are practically a total loss.

One fire fighter, Norman Shive, aged 32, severed an artery of his right hand when he smashed in a window with his first. He was given first aid treatment by S. T. Fulmer, chief of the Jeffersonville Fire Company. Mr. Fulmer was attending to his duties as an inspector for the Bell Telephone Company in Sellersville when the alarm sounded. Mr. Shive later was taken to the office of Dr. J. T. Shaffer. Several stitches were required to close the wound.

One of Doylestown's newest industries, MacEwan & Smith, Inc., rubber manufacturers, has been operating steadily since its location here in February, according to assistant manager O. Maynard Doerflinger, of 184 East State street.

Hitler and Il Duce TALK IN PRIVACY

Discuss the Immediate Fate of Europe, and Conference Appears To Be Satisfactory

LARGE CROWDS CHEER

ROME, May 4—For an hour and a half, the absolute autocratic rulers of Germany and Italy discussed the immediate fate of Europe in privacy today and emerged apparently well satisfied with the progress of their deliberations.

The Hitler-Mussolini conversations are designed to strengthen the Rome-Berlin axis and possibly evolve a military alliance aimed at Soviet Russia.

With completion of a round of picturesque ceremonies carried out in streets packed with cheering thousands who stood in a drizzling rain, the two dictators launched their momentous discussions and Hitler lost no time in beating his favorite drum—the menace of Communism.

Mussolini, according to all indications, considers a military alliance less urgent than Hitler does.

Arrest Alleged Slayer

Philadelphia, May 4—Detectives announced today they have arrested the gunman who shot and killed Wesley Major, young semi-professional baseball player, in a Chester house nearly five months ago.

The wooden-legged suspect, Frank Pepe, 29, confessed he killed Major in a scuffle during an attempted hold-up, police said. He was implicated, detective disclosed, by two other alleged members of the hold-up band of four—Robert McKnight, 19, and Joseph Trainor, also 19, upon their capture in a pistol battle with Philadelphia police.

Acting on the information purportedly supplied by McKnight and Trainor, a police squad surrounded a house in South Philadelphia this morning and arrested Pepe when he answered the door. The fourth alleged member of the gang, Edward Manyak, 29, was slain by a policeman a fortnight ago during a running gun battle over downtown rooftops here.

Four-Alarm Blaze

Philadelphia, May 4—A spectacular four-alarm fire today razed five residences in South Philadelphia, made 50 persons homeless and forced several hundred residents to flee in their night-clothing.

The flames threatened an entire block, destroyed a huge stable and damaged seven homes. Six horses perished in the stable and 44 others were led to safety by firemen.

Four firemen were hurt while fighting to confine the blaze. Many of those compelled to evacuate dwellings were provided with temporary haven by neighbors. Firemen were credited with making a number of heroic rescues of trapped householders. The fire, the origin of which could not be immediately determined, is believed to have sprung up in the lively stable of Abe Elton.

SIXTY-THREE STUDENTS LEAVE FOR CAPITAL

High School Seniors to Spend Four Days at Washington

RETURN ON SATURDAY

Sixty-three Bristol high school seniors, accompanied by three members of the faculty, and a P. R. R. representative, left here this morning via Pennsylvania Railroad at 9:23 for Washington, D. C.

The group will return Saturday evening, arriving here at 8:44, after touring the National Capital and visiting the various points of outstanding interest.

Members of the faculty accompanying the students were Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of the Bristol public schools, Miss Gladys Hewitt, and Charles Boyd. John Good represented the P. R. R. Co.

Relatives, friends and numerous students were at the station to see the party off.

A list of students making the trip included the following:

Minerva Anderson, Doris Barr, Wesley Berry, Mildred Booz, Anna Brown, John Bustraan, George Carter, Clara Caucei, Leon Chalkley, Caesar Clanciosi, Lewis Conklin, Peter DeLuca, 12c-2; Peter DeLuca, 12c-1; Raymond Dewees, Helen Dewitt.

The Liberals Dissent

Washington, May 3.

Philip La Follette finds time to check up on the reaction among the professional liberals to the new party which he and his brother Robert launched last week, he probably will be a good deal surprised — and, perhaps, a little pained.

BECAUSE, the fact is that among the leading country saviors and "forward-looking men" with whom the La Follettes for years have been more or less shining figures, a curious difference of opinion has developed, considerable of which, it must be said, is not enthusiastic and some, distinctly hostile. As a matter of fact, this tendency among the Children of Light to split into groups, none of which is happy over the way things are going, has been noted in Washington for quite some time.

IT IS one of the recognized marks of New Deal degeneration and the reason such blatant individuals as Senator Minton, of Indiana, have forged to the front as White House wheel horses and intimates. For months, in Senate and House the more robust and respected of the one-time Administration spokesmen have gradually been relinquishing that role—some, because they could no longer fill it, except at a price they considered too high to pay, and others because exhibitions of independence had rendered them suspect by the palace politicians and the President himself. However, this lack of cohesive thought among the so-called liberals had not been openly proclaimed until the La Follette launching.

THAT INTERESTING event was the first formal announcement of the break in the liberal lineup.

Legion To Present Outstanding Film Here

Robert W. Bracken Post of the American Legion is presenting today and tomorrow in conjunction with the management of the Bristol Theatre one of the outstanding motion pictures ever to have come to Bristol.

The "Dead March" pictures the atrocities of the current civil war in Spain, the Sino-Japanese turmoil, the Italian invasion of Ethiopia, and some of the hitherto censored scenes of the Great World War.

The famous radio news commentator Boake Carter acts as narrator throughout the entire picture and interpolates many of his own ideas and beliefs into it.

This new film also traces the current course of events in international events and stresses the trend of many nations toward increased armaments.

The musical score is by Erno Rappe, famous radio musical director. The proceeds of the affair is to be used to carry on the Post's extensive Americanism program and to carry on the Legion's program in the community. Tickets may be obtained at the Post Home or from any Legion member, members of the Auxiliary and Cadet Corps members, and also at the box office on the night of the performance. There will be no increase in prices. The picture has never before been shown in the Eastern part of the United States and bids fair to be one of the outstanding pictures of the year.

BLAZE THREATENS MILL STREET STORES

Fire Discovered in Ted's Men's Shop, 409-13 Mill Street, Shortly Before Midnight

DAMAGE MAY BE $2,000

Fire shortly before last midnight threatened the business places in the 400 block on north side of Mill street, when flames were discovered in Ted Men's Shop, 409-13 Mill street, operated by Lester Zalesne. The damage done to the stock is estimated by Mr. Zalesne at between $1500 and $1800, while Chief Hagerman says the damage to the property will not exceed $100. The interior of the store was blistered by the heat but most of the damage was done to the stock. Authorities blame a cigarette for the fire. The building is owned by the M. Cohen Estate.

Mr. Zalesne and a few friends, he says, had not been out of the store over 20 minutes when the flames were discovered. A group met in the store last night to discuss playing a ball game on Sunday. After they left the place they drove down the Roosevelt Boulevard to partake of a lunch. It was after their departure that the flames were discovered.

Joseph Burns, member of Bristol Consolidated Fire Department, was standing in the Straus store, a few doors away, when he heard shouting and going to investigate found the store afire. Burns knowing that Zalesne uses the rear of the store as living quarters, broke through the glass in the front door. An alarm was sounded and the firemen quickly responded. The flames, although considerably advanced, were quickly extinguished.

Mr. Zalesne stated today that he had reduced his insurance a few days ago and had enlarged his store. He had just received $200 worth of uniforms which were among the clothing destroyed.

DRAW LOTS TO NAME DENOMINATION OF SCHOOL ORATOR

School Board Arranges Plan For Next Six Consecutive Baccalaureate Services

METHODIST THIS YEAR

Must Enumerate All Illiterate Aliens in Addition To Children

Bristol school board, last night, chose by lot the denomination from which a preacher will be selected to deliver the baccalaureate sermon to the next seven graduating classes at the Bristol high school. The result of the drawing of slips of paper from a hat was as follows:

Methodist, 1938; Episcopal, 1939; Hebrew, 1940; Catholic, 1941; Lutheran, 1942; Baptist, 1943; Presbyterian, 1944.

The slips of papers with the name of each of the above denominations, with the exception of Presbyterian, were placed in a hat. After the first slip had been drawn then the one bearing "Presbyterian" was placed in the hat. The "Presbyterian" slip was omitted until after the first drawing because the baccalaureate sermon was preached in the Presbyterian church last year.

It was stated at the Board meeting that this year's graduating class had selected St. Mark's Church as the place for holding the baccalaureate services. It was also stated that the holding of such a service in St. Mark's church would be contrary to church discipline and therefore could not be held.

The School Board decided upon the drawing method and also decided that hereafter the baccalaureate services will be held in the high school auditorium.

It was also decided that students having conditions at the end of the term must pass an examination before the beginning of the fall term and continuing with their classes.

The school enumerator, Miss Nora Jones, who was selected at a special meeting of the Board, held last month, will this year have to enumerate all illiterate aliens in addition to the children of school age.

Thomas G. Wiley, Oswego State Normal School, N. Y.; J. Alvin Mulwhiney, Devon; and a Mr. Johnson were elected to positions on the teaching faculty. The salary of Mr. Wiley was fixed at $1300. Mr. Mulwhiney was elected pending his receipt of certificates previous to September. The salary of Mr. Johnson was set at $1400. It was stated that John Lehr, Philadelphia, chosen at the April meeting for the position of shop teacher, had declined the position. It was to fill this vacancy that Mr. Johnson was named.

Arthur P. Brady, chairman of Property committee, reported having had a leak repaired at the Bath street building and also gave a resume of work planned at the Washington street school. Mr. Brady also reported the

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE

There comes a time when a good speaker becomes too good, when his success technique outstrips his justifiable purpose as an expositor and he becomes a wily advocate of a cause, resorting to every trick with the sole object of winning, at all costs, right or wrong. Recognizing this truth and hopeful of creating a new concept of the mission of public speaking, a movement has been started by leaders in speech education against those who believe it is their function to train students "to have a predatory advantage in society."

Any education which seems to have as its slogan "training in techniques which will prevent a sucker from getting a break" or "training in techniques of friendliness that will enable you to get the better of the other fellow," simply falls without the pale of true education, a conference of teachers and students was told by Prof. Arleig B. Williamson of New York University, former president of the National Association of Teachers of Speech. Other speakers on the same occasion agreed with Professor Williamson in deploring the glorification of devices and technique which inject the element of unfairness in public speaking.

The listening and long-suffering public, however while heartily in accord with what Professor Williamson and his colleagues have to say, does not look upon the digital reform as of vital importance. The listening and long-suffering public remembers too many occasions when the too-good speaker has had his little victory, but was found out in the long run. The clever and unfair spellbinder inevitably is revealed as the charlatan he is, whether he is engaged merely in a debating contest or in the business of selling something to an individual, a city, a state or the nation.

SUN'S SERENITY SHATTERED

At a meeting of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia motion pictures were shown of terrific activities around the sun, scarcely comprehensible, in speeds and distances, to human understanding. Explosions big enough to swallow several planets were recorded by the astronomical camera on two recent occasions.

In fact, only a month ago one of these eruptions from the sun's surface reached a height of nearly a million miles. What a seething concentration of terrific energies the sun is, has been graphically disclosed by the magic of photography.

What students of the science of astronomy have had disclosed to them recently has multiplied the mysteries of the solar system, whose solutions may prove more exciting than all that was shown before about the life-giving center of our little universe.

A speaker at the meeting assured his audience that the last fifteen years have been "the most exciting in the history of astronomy," mainly because of new and startling discoveries in physics and their relation to new knowledge of the sun's composition.

To the layman the studies of astronomers may seem only vaguely interesting, but the potentialities of new knowledge through the study of this most ancient of all sciences are unlimited.

No news isn't good news when it has been crowded off page 1 by something worse.

HULMEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ward, Burlington, N. C., recently spent a week with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Dicken. Mr. and Mrs. Ward are now in attendance at the hosiery federation convention in Charlotte, N. C.

Twenty-three members of the Methodist Ladies' Aid were guests of Mrs. Robert H. Conly, last evening, at a business and social session, with Mrs. Edward Davis directing the meeting. Devotional period was in charge of Mrs. Samuel Everett. The Aid has purchased new porch rockers for use at the parsonage. The May 31st session will be at the home of Mrs. E. D. Atter.

Hulmeville borough council, in monthly session Monday evening in the council chamber, was presided over by Norman Davis. The councilmanic body, after discussion of the careless use of rifles and other firearms by children of minor age in the borough, decided to publicly notify such individuals and their parents that if such persons are found illegally using rifles or other firearms in the borough, they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. Council, in issuing this notice, quotes from the uniform firearms act: "It is illegal to discharge, in the streets or alleys of any city or borough, a rifle, air gun, spring gun, or any implement which impels with force a metal pellet of any kind. First offense, a fine of five dollars, second offense a fine of fifteen dollars and imprisonment of not less than ten nor more than thirty days."

CHAPTER I

WHEN Gregory Sallust first saw the girl it was already nearly midnight on the last day of his holiday. He had made a leisurely tour of Normandy, stopping at some of the less pretentious inns where the cuisine was still unspoiled by the summer tourist traffic, and was ending up with three days of riotous living at Deauville.

It was a little early yet for that playground of the rich, but the Casino was fairly full. English, French and Americans jostled each other at the tables while here and there a less familiar type of face proclaimed a true Latin, Scandinavian or Slav.

Gregory glanced again at the girl who had just come in, then lowered his eyes to the man she was accompanying, a strange little figure, now seated at the table. He was not a dwarf; yet was curiously ill-proportioned. His body was frail and childlike, but his head massive and powerful. From it a shock of silver hair swept back, giving him a benign and priestlike appearance, but his rattrap mouth and curiously pale blue eyes belied any suggestion of mildness.

Catching sight of him had first drawn Gregory Sallust's attention to the girl, for Gregory knew him—him was not surprising, since he knew most people of importance.

From his public school Gregory had gone straight into the war but a nasty head wound had put an end to his trench service and he had been seconded to Intelligence. At the time of the currency collapse in Central Europe he had left the Service to undertake certain confidential work for English banking interests in Vienna, and when that job ended he drifted into journalism in order to supplement his private income of a few hundreds a year.

That had led, a year or two later, to his being sent out to the Far East as war correspondent to one of the "big London dailies." On his return he had remained unemployed except for occasional literary work until an old friend recommended him, as highly suited to undertake a special investigation needing secrecy and brains, to a group of men who controlled one of Britain's greatest commercial corporations. Gregory had accepted and as a preliminary had taken his fortnight's "holiday" in Normandy. He was due back to make his first report the following day.

The girl remained standing behind her companion's chair, and Gregory watched her covertly. He was wondering if she were a poule de luxe or just some friend's girl in whom the old man was taking a fatherly interest, but Gregory knew that he was not the sort of old man to derive the least pleasure from the innocent conversation of respectable young women. He was almost a recluse, having cut himself off from all social life years before. Even when he traveled he rarely appeared in the public rooms of the hotels where he stayed, owing to a super-sensitiveness about his physical shortcomings. On the other hand, he was by no means the type of old rip who travels with pseudo "nieces" in his entourage. He was reputed to be coarsely rich, but Gregory had never heard the word "mistress" breathed in connection with his name.

A little frown of annoyance wrinkled Gregory's forehead, catching at the ear which lifted his left eyebrow. What a pity, he thought, that he was returning to England the following day. If only he had seen this beautiful and mysterious girl soon after his arrival at Deauville! It would have been fun to have tried to meet her.

"Rien ne va plus," came the level voice of the croupier, and Gregory realized too late that he had failed to place his stake.

"Really," he thought, "I am behaving like an idiot, and if I am not careful I shall be thinking of that lovely face of hers for weeks. I have known this sort of thing happen to me before, so I had better go home to bed before I get her too much on my mind."

He pushed the cards away from him, and, collecting his chips, stood up. Then, just as he left the table, a simple action caught his eye while the players sat tense receiving their cards for a new deal.

The elderly man had pulled out his watch, but he was not looking at it. He held it in the palm of his hand and the girl was gazing at it over his shoulder. She nodded, and turning from the table without a word walked quickly away.

It was just midnight, Gregory knew, and as he watched the receding figure, so graceful in its sheath of heavy silk, he paused to wonder just what lay behind that little act. He was certain that neither of the two had spoken. Was the old man sine halted. The taxi pulled up in the shadow of some buildings two hundred yards behind. Gregory turned up the collar of his coat to hide his white shirt-front and with his soft hat pulled well down to conceal his face leaned out of the window.

The girl had descended from her car and evidently dismissed it, for the limousine swung about and sped back towards the big villas and great hotels along the Deauville waterfront.

A man came forward from behind the deserted customs shed. Quiet greetings were exchanged. Then the girl called a solitary taxi that still lingered on the bank. She pushed the man in before her and sending her somewhere or just reminding her of an appointment? Anyway, she was just leaving the salle—and alone!

"Follow that car," said Gregory softly to his driver.

The temptation was too much for Gregory. True, he had only a dozen hours or so before he must pack and catch his boat. But much could be done in a dozen hours. With a long loping stride, curiously reminiscent of a stalking lion, he made his way to the lobby.

Before she appeared in her wraps, he had already collected his light coat and dark soft hat and had a taxi waiting a few yards from the entrance of the casino.

Too old a bird to attempt to speak to her, he watched, a little surprised that no car was waiting to pick her up, as she walked down the steps and turned to the south along the gardens which fringed the plage. He gave her about five minutes' start and then boarded his taxi, giving the man precise instructions in fluent French.

The taxi slid along the asphalt road, easing down to a crawl when the lady once more came in sight. A moment later she turned round the far corner of the Normandie. The taxi speeded up and came level with the corner. Gregory peered out. Opposite the Deauville branch of the famous jewellers, Van Cleef & Appel, situated in the side of the Normandie Hotel, stood a large limousine. The girl was just getting in.

"Follow that car," said Gregory softly to his driver, and then sat back again.

The limousine ran silently through the almost deserted streets, crossed the little Place with its now darkened bars, dress shops, and confectioneries, then took the road to Trouville, only a mile or so away. At Trouville Harbour the limousine bent forward to whisper an address to the driver. Then she too got in and the taxi moved off towards the center of the town. Gregory sat back and his taxi followed.

For a few moments they wound in and out the old-fashioned twisting streets, then Gregory's taxi pulled up once more. The other stood some way along a narrow street outside a lighted doorway. The man and the girl were getting out. Gregory could see now that the man was hatless and wore breeches topped by a leather airman's coat.

"Stay here," he ordered as he stepped down into the street, softly closing the door of his cab behind him.

The other taxi, now paid off, had driven on. The place was a cheap café open to the street. A few night birds were sitting silent with drinks before them at the little tables. The girl and the man were not among them, but Gregory's quick eye had immediately noted a side door giving separate entrance from the street to the rooms above. He shrugged his slightly stooping shoulders impatiently. It surprised him a little that such a gloriously lovely lady should consent to meet her lover in such a sordid joint, but—that was her affair.

He was just about to turn away when a sharp cry came, muffled a little by the heavy curtains between the chinks of light appeared from the room above the café.

A sudden grin spread over Gregory's lean face. In three strides he had crossed the narrow street crouched like a leopard, he raced up the narrow flight of stairs, dashed across the landing and flung his weight against the only door through which there appeared light.

Dear Son:

We welcome you and Helen back from your honeymoon. After you've settled a bit we'll drop in to see your new home.

I remember the day, some thirty years ago, when your Mother and I came back to our first home. I split kindling for the cast-iron kitchen stove, and it took Mother all afternoon to bake some bread. Instead of her vacuum-cleaner, Mother had a broom . . . and how she made it fly. But our prize possession was in the parlor . . . a real talking-machine, with chubby cylinder-records and a big morning-glory horn.

We used to march for miles all over town on our shopping trips. How I fidgeted while Mother shopped. We were both worn out.

Things have changed a lot since then, all right — and you'll both be better off for it. Helen won't have to spend half her days in the kitchen like Mother used to. The advertisements in the daily newspaper will save her those punishing miles of shopping. They'll keep her posted on current values, give her the names of dependable products, tell her all about special sales. When you come home nights you'll find her fresh as a daisy . . . ready for a jolly evening with your friends.

I'll trade the "good old days" for the good NEW days any day.

But enough of reminiscence . . . I rejoice in the exciting years of youth that are ahead for you both.

Affectionately,

Dad

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

GRAND

Sparkling with a wealth of hilarious situations played against a background of motion picture-making, Lee Tracy's latest starring vehicle, "Crashing Hollywood," tells of the romance between Miss Woodbury, a candidate for screen fame, and Tracy, an ambitious author who abides in the film capital to write scenarios, comes to the Grand Theatre today.

Tracy is shown as a collaborator with Paul Guilfoyle and his wife, Lee Patrick, in writing his first picture—knowing that Guilfoyle is an ex-convict, nor that he is writing in a leading character in the film, which deals with an actual robbery in which both Guilfoyle and "The Hawk" were involved.

There will also be six acts of amateur vaudeville, contesting for cash prizes, at 8.45.

MOM

MUMSY

TO EVERYONE'S MOTHER—for Mother's Day—we dedicate the few lines—

Never a sigh for the cares that she bore me,
Never a thought of the joys that flew by,
Her one regret that she couldn't do more,
Thoughtless and selfish, her master was I.

Oh, the long nights that she came at my call,
Oh, the soft touch of her hands on my brow,
Oh, the long years that she gave up her all for me,
Oh, how I yearn for her gentleness now!

Slave to her baby! yes, that was the way of her,
Counting her greatest of services, small,
Words cannot tell what this old heart would say of her,
Mother—the sweetest and fairest of all!

PLACE YOUR MOTHER ON A PEDESTAL—then step back and look at her. How long she appears! As young as you would want her to look? Probably she would appear years younger, in a new outfit, or the new outfit looks swell only—there seems to be something strong in her hair—that's it. A new PERMANENT WAVE is all she needs. SO WHY NOT GIVE HER ONE OF IDA'S INDIVIDUALLY CREATED, MACHINELESS PERMANENTS AND A BECOMING COIFFURE. I'm sure mother would like that, and it will last all summer long.

BOB NEELY SHUTS OUT NEW HOPE, 2 TO 0

NEW HOPE, May 4.—Bob Neely was in the spotlight at Yardley yesterday as a result of his sensational 3-hit shut-out win over New Hope here. 2-0. The result of the game was three-fold. It gave the league leaders their first taste of defeat in five starts this year. It marked the tail-enders initial victory in five league games. And it uncovered a new hurling find for Mike Derrick for this was the first time he ever sent young Bob to the peak. But with what he has, Mike will experiment with anything once—and this was one that worked to perfection. Bob struck out 5, passed one, and gave up only 3 hits. His hill opponent, Bud Hartman, pitched a fine game though touched for 5 hits. He whiffed 9 Yardley batters, and issued no base on balls, although he hit Stan Bennett twice.

LANGHORNE DEFEATS BENSALEM NINE

LANGHORNE, May 4.—The Langhorne Redskins went haywire in the sixth inning of their game with Bensalem here yesterday and scored a run. But it was enough for big Bill McCahan, right hand ace of Langhorne's mound staff, to win his half game this time, the final score being 1-0 with the Redskins on top.

The victory marked the second without defeat in three starts for McCahan. Bill has had no "breathers," but has had to work hard throughout all three games and yet could gain only two decisions. He triumphed over Al Driver of Newtown in the season's opener, 2-1; then turned back Bensalem yesterday 1-0. But his crowning achievement—that 12 inning, no-hit, no run game against Bristol—awaited him nothing. If only his mates could have supplied him with a run in that game, he would have danced with joy.

ERNE DUSEK TO OPPOSE KAYO KOVERLY TONIGHT

TRENTON, May 4.—The finest wrestling show assembled by Promoter Johnny Ipp will be presented tonight at the Arena. Rough and tumble artists and clever scientific grapplers comprise the card and Ernie Dusek, wildest of the four riotous Duseks will oppose George (Kayo) Koverly, free swinging Hollywood maniac, in the one fall one hour set to that will be co-featured with the encounter between Bob Gregory, European light-heavy-weight champion, and Nick Elitch, classy Miami 180 pounder.

Dusek and Koverly are two of the roughest, toughest grapplers in the game and anything is liable to happen when they get in the ring. There, viciousness is known from coast to coast and fans who like their wrestling rough and rowdy will have their fill when this pair clash.

Gregory, who hit the headline in every newspaper in the world when he married Princess Baba, daughter of the white Rajah and Rance of Sarawak, is one of the finest scientific wrestlers ever to land on these shores. He is an expert at Jiu-Jitsu and Greco-Roman wrestling and New York mat critics raved at his clever work when he made his debut at Madison Square Garden several weeks ago.

Jack League, smooth Texan, who held Chief Chewacki to a draw two weeks ago, will vie with Chief War Eagle, colorful Indian, in the feature supporting bout. Al Bisignano, popular Italian, will tangle with huge Floyd Marshall, and Charley Fox, a newcomer from Cleveland, will come to grips with Joe Maynard, rough Chicagoan.

The first bout will start at 8:45 p. m. and ladies will be admitted free to the ringside section when accompanied by a male escort.

DARING DRIVERS TO RACE AT LANGHORNE

The hardest driving bunch of daredevil speedsters that has ever gathered on old Langhorne Speedway will turn out for the 100 mile program on Sunday, May 15, Ralph A. Hankinson, veteran promoter, is pointing out while naming the star entries for the initial auto race card on the big mile track.

Undaunted by the threats of Indianapolis speedway aces and the crack western delegation of knights of the roaring road, eastern pilots are giving for battle with high hopes of making a clean sweep in the money division. Most confident probably is Bobbie Sall of Peterson who has his fast Miller tuned to a high pitch for the events. Sall, despite many victories on many tracks and championship honors he once held, has never won at Langhorne. He believes that May 15 will be his day.

Saying little but nursing a strong desire to score at Langhorne is little Frankie Bailey of New Brunswick, the 1926 eastern states champion of the AAA who this year will drive Earl Henchman's Miller. Small in stature but leader of foot, Bailey stands a good chance to take the money if his car functions the way it should.

Don't overlook Vern Orenduff, Hankinson warns. Never has there been a harder driver on Langhorne than the lanky Floridian who on May 15 will drive Ted Nyquist's new McDowell car, a duplicate of the machine driven by Doc George Mackenzie when the latter was the big thrill boy of Langhorne. Then there is Gus Zarka, of Doylestown, Bert Ross of Trenton, Henri Guerard of Elizabeth, Red Redmond of Atlanta, Johnny Moretti of Atlantic City, Frank Moore, of Silver Springs, Milt Marion, of St. Albans and some dozen other eastern campaigners who are nursing an ambition to trim the invading aces from the west.

But it will be no cinch to turn back the big star visitors, Hankinson admits for such drivers as Ted Horn, Chet Gardner, Tony Hillman, Frank Beeder and possibly Billy Winn will have cars that represent the last word in high speed engineering and no one in the know will ever question their ability to drive.

Educators Gather To Consider The Exceptional Child

Woods Schools was founded after more than 20 years of consecutive activity by The Woods Schools in the training and development of the exceptional child.

Dr. Charlotte Easby Grave, psychologist for The Woods Schools, extended the welcome to 250 men and women when the morning session convened at 10:30, presenting Dr. Walton who presided at the first session of the day's conference.

The use of mental hygiene and adjustment of instruction to the needs of individual pupils are the best remedies for truancy, J. E. Wallin, of the Delaware State Department of Instruction told the conference.

"A child should be examined in the school clinic when he shows tendencies toward truancy and physical or mental correctives applied," Wallin said. "The problem of juvenile delinquency largely solves itself, with proper adjustment of courses of study," he declared.

Mrs. Cook, the chief of the Division of Special Problems of the U. S. Office of Education, considered the need for special education for the exceptional child. She said in part:

"Data compiled in Office of Education shows that special schools or classes in public day schools for exceptional children have been established in forty-six states, encompassing approximately 750 cities and enrolling at least 300,000 children.

"Definite progress has been made in an increased demand for higher qualifications of a specialized type from prospective teachers of exceptional children. Progress is also apparent in extending a better understanding, particularly of the breadth of the problem of educating exceptional children and toward more co-ordination of effort on the part of those concerned, particularly laymen, with the welfare of each of the several separate groups.

"The crux of the problem of educating exceptional children in the public school system is the need for a growing recognition of what education can contribute to the economic independence and social efficiency of handicapped groups and the recognition also of the need for sources of support definitely and permanently provided for the purpose.

"Encouragement may be found in a report issued by the President's Committee on Federal and State Relations in Education" calling attention to the need of special education for the different types of exceptional children.

"There are two important essentials for the continuing progress in special education: 1. greater interest on the part of the public; and 2. more adequate financing."

Considering "Institutional Rearing as a Factor in Delinquency," Dr. Charles A. Ford, of the Temple University Department of Psychology, told the educators that children on the whole turn out better when they are raised in institutions than in foster homes. "Foster homes," he stated, "show a higher per cent of delinquents than institutions."

Dr. Ford continued: "We have positive illustrations of the good that can arise from institutional rearing for dependent children. In a study made in eastern Pennsylvania of the proportion of delinquency in children raised in foster homes, as compared with institutional rearing it was found:

"1. The foster home furnished a higher proportion of delinquency than the child-caring institution.

"2. The delinquents studied, no matter where they have lived, had about the same number of offenses charged against them.

"3. No matter what type of residence the children came from, it seems to be advantageous to have longer residence.

"4. It is certainly not apparent from these data that foster home placement was more advantageous than child-caring institutions."

Mrs. Hedi Katz, listed as the final speaker for the day's program, took up the subject of "Creative Music in the Progressive Education Program or the Exceptional Child." Mrs. Katz, assistant director of the Chatham Square Music School, New York, told that:

"Every child is born with creative abilities, some with more; some with less. The urge to play is in itself creative ability and can be shifted to different channels if taken hold of in time. Almost everyone is born with natural response to music, which can be awakened by outside stimulant. Radio has served as stimulant, because of man's necessity for self-expression. To establish a living relation between the child and musical sound is worthwhile task. Nothing can be put into human being, but there, and might otherwise dry up in the average, the gifted and the exceptional child.

"Credit goes to Mother Georgia Stevens, Director of Plus X School, who invented the approach by which children write tunes quickly and easily.

"In the play of the child, the whole personality shows itself clearly to the trained observer. Experiments with children below the average showed ability at creative musical expression. Therapeutic influence on the diseased mind through creative music, modeling or painting is in its embryonic stage of experimentation, but already points to definite results. There is hope that the field of creative psychology and creative therapeutic education will reach such proportions as to benefit some of the millions mentally deficient, to such a degree that they will cease to be so much a burden and reproach to present-day society."

For the enlightenment and study of the large group that gathered on the lawn of "Greenwood" in a delightful Spring setting, Dr. Stanwood Cobb, principal of Chevy Chase Country Day School, Maryland, considered "The Inferiority Complex and Its Cure."

"The inferiority complex is an important discovery of modern psychology. This discovery has been a great help in education in the case of children seriously suffering from those paralyzing fears and inhibitions which the inferiority complex causes," he told.

"The public school system has attempted to solve by the method of segregation the problem of the slow-minded child and of the child who for various other reasons has become retarded in academic work. Special classes for slow or backward children, gifted and sympathetic teachers with special methods and a curriculum designed to bring out whatever powers these children have—this procedure has greatly relieved the dilemma of the retarded child and is one of the splendid developments of modern education in the public school.

"The feeling is beginning to grow among educators, however, that there are some cases in which segregation is not the ideal solution of this problem of academic retardation. The children who are backward in certain which was so solid in the 1936 campaign as to establish a record and so comprehensive as to take in the Communist party, the organ of which, the Daily Worker, by the way, is strongly urging the new pump-priming plan of the President, now pending in Congress. To read the Daily Worker, one easily might get the idea that this was primarily its plan, and that the Communists had a particular interest in its enactment. However, while there is no Communist ardor over the La Follette movement and Governor Philip purposely kicked the Communists in the face, that, except indirectly, has nothing to do with the lack of liberal harmony over the La Follette movement.

IT IS true that some of the more scintillating intellectuals hail the La Follette pronouncements as in tune with traditional American progressivism; assert that their economics and philosophy are far sounder than those of the New Deal; congratulate them upon not attempting to form a farmer-labor alliance which, however, is the very thing they want to do—and without which they won't have any party at all. It is true, too, that another group insists that the movement is of vast political importance, highly praises the idealism of the La Follettes but insists that their manifesto was cloudy and weak, and that its one concrete proposal—nationalization of the banking system—is silly. From these liberals also comes complaint of the obvious effort to "make the new party a religion."

HOWEVER, from the extreme left-wing admirers of the La Follettes there flows no praise at all. On the contrary, one of the most influential leaders of this element roundly denounces the brothers, declares that in the matter of "rugged individualism" they talk like Herbert Hoover; that so far from leading a liberal party, they are galloping as fast as they can back to the horse-and-buggy age; that all their party will do is run Roosevelt. This final prediction is echoed by one of Mr. Roosevelt's great friends and admirers, Mr. Raymond Clapper, who rather lugubriously writes that "Unquestionably, the La Follette movement is more dangerous to Mr. Roosevelt than the opposition of the conservatives. He was able to make his fight because of the solid backing of the very kind of people the La Follettes are now reaching for. . . . If this movement catches on, it will mean that large numbers of Mr. Roosevelt's strongest supporters will be moving over into the new party, with rapidly declining interest in the fortunes of the Roosevelt Administration during the remainder of the term."

WHEN to these variegated liberal reactions are added, first, the fact that Mayor LaGuardia has let it be known that he thinks it unwise to launch a new party at this time, and that the Hon. John L. Lewis has not said a word one way or the other, it seems clear the La Follettes missed sounding a real rallying cry for the liberal hosts. How far they missed they may not know until they begin to check up, but at any rate, it is all good Wisconsin stuff.
